After finishing, place the fences on the open space against the wall in the roof. The process is the same, except follow the model as you did with the roof this side for the outer layer. To build the entrance, simply remove the central staircase or slab between windows or the space that was left from the model previously. The top of the roof has 2 extra plates on each side of the tablet and the combo scale. For the inner layer, position the scales that go forward with the outer scales, as you go up with the shape. To fix this scale the stairs upside down, going upwards with the same roof scheme a block inward against the walls. I chose to fill these dots in and used birch wood to show an example of a vacant space left. Once you have finished all the previous steps, feel free to "abeterate" your interior with paintings and other items to give the house a better look. Even along the top of the walls and the projecting angles inwards there are gaps you could fill. Once finished with that place 2 fences going upwards on each side of the ring but outwards on top of the external stairs more. In this friendly do-it-yourself beginner, you will learn how to make a home in Minecraft. This is important to see clearly there you are building and not to accidentally lose a step. This is the basic model of your home. If you do, you may need to compensate for the small details later depending on the size. As you can see in the image, this is the model of the models I put together. Creates a ring along the inside of the model. Repeat this with each side facing outwards. Oak tables are used only as a template so that they are not needed once the ring is created. The bottom of the wall. The stairs to give him a clean look. At the top you can or may not need to replace the block you have chosen to give you a cleaner look. Place the glass panels inside the trunks in the center of the ring. Replace this with any block lock your choosing. I chose to use spruce planks to help show the ring. Then place another stair on top of that one facing away from the middle of the ring. I used birch planks on the right to show the slabs and full blocks of stone I used instead of stairs to extend its length, along with some alternately placed stairs. Then place two stairs facing outwards with the bottom side on the top. Repeat process until finished. On the inside of the roof, the place may look a little empty and out of place. Both sides are identical in building. The double ring wall is pretty much the same thing but requires more attention to detail, blocks and slabs to be applied. To start, place an upside down stair facing inwards towards the middle of the ring, like in the 1st picture. Repeat this for the side directly opposite of this once, only if it is a narrow wall as well. This process is very similar to the narrow wall roofing section, but with a slightly altered process. Next, place two logs facing outwards on top of the fences. Next, place another upside down stair facing inwards and towards the middle of the ring and repeat this process until the stair is almost towards the middle. Face the outermost stairs outwards from the wall and place the innermost stairs on the side of the outermost stairs, at a sharp angle, while facing them upside down. There are gaps between each ring set. Now repeat this process on each ring that you built around the house until you are finished. Your house should look similar to this now, but there are still some more things to do. After this place a single slab on the top of the block going outwards. I used birch stairs to help point out the needed blocks, with the opposite side being the block I will replace it with. I used wool for this, since it would help with the overall design of my house. What I did to fix this was putting another stone stair facing outwards and upside down on the bottom most block. Stack the logs the top the top of the house, and finally place a other spruce staircase facing the and upside down. This section only applies to walls with only one ring, as shown in the pictures. I used the stairs in the corners of the ceiling to give the ceiling a smoother appearance. Finally you have completed your best home in Minecraft, now go enjoy it! In this photo, I have placed my door in the center of the double ring wall, external is large and has many dark spots. To combat this phenomenon, place flashlights at the corners and projection blocks to provide sufficient illumination. When you enter your new home, you will notice that anything your home was built on now became the floor. Once it happens, place an upside-down staircase facing outside between the two, as shown in fourth figure. Once reached the top on narrow ring walls placed blocks along the half-way and finish with slabs on them. The building materials used do not matter, I chose mine because I like look it. Then, place more blocks behind those stairs to fill the space behind it to give a better look, more complete. Go from other side and repeat same process until the two highest stairs are a block away from one from . You can add these models together as many times as you want to make the house even bigger. Finish the bottom side with a plate on the top side of the lower block in the center. After that place 2 oak trunks facing towards top on the left and right sides of inner ring, ring.
